NSEA Mourns for Victims and Families of Las Vegas Shooting

Educators will work to answer students' questions, help them cope, and feel safe

On behalf of the more than 24,000 educators the Nevada State Education Association (NSEA) represents, our hearts and prayers are with the victims and families of those affected by the horrific tragedy Sunday night in Las Vegas. We want to express our sincere gratitude to the first responders and medical personnel who put the safety of others before their own. They represent the best of our community and bring light where there is darkness.

The day after this unimaginable tragedy educators once again are asking how they can comfort and reassure students. NSEA has posted links to its website providing information on how to help kids feel safe after a tragedy and knowing what to do in a crisis.

"When there is tragedy in the world, we wonder what will tomorrow look like for our children. The answer? We teach and provide our students a safe place to learn. We teach and let them know they are loved. We teach and provide them the knowledge to be a positive force in this world. We are educators, and we teach," said Ruben Murillo, Jr., NSEA President.
